

I began working at Thunderbird in September 1991. As Managing Editor of the Thunderbird International Business Review I oversee the editorial review process for all manuscripts from submission to publication, publicize the journal at professional meetings and through written communications, and work closely with authors and reviewers from many countries as manuscripts are sought and then edited for grammar and style. I also maintain close communications with the editorial board and the reviewers. During an interim period (2002 - 2006) I spent time in Institutional Advancement working with the development office and the alumni office helping with donor relations, editing written materials, and working on the Annual Fund
