TEACHING & MENTORSHIP

Philosophy of learning/teaching

Employing a critical pedagogical approach, I strive to create environments that engage students as collaborators and co-learners who intellectually challenge each other with respect and mutuality. The classes I have taught in undergraduate and graduate nursing education have included traditional as well as asynchronous/hybrid course formats. In all classroom settings, I believe effective learning is facilitated when teachers use an interactive style to stimulate critical thinking, while role modeling respect for student's capabilities, ideas and feelings. I am committed to mentoring at all educational levels, particularly in order to increase the number of Latino and other students of color in nursing and social/behavioral science research careers.
