EXPERT AREAS

I study identity, power, and representation in news media and popular culture. My research explores the ways narratives reflect the lived experiences of BIPOC communities and marginalized groups. I am also interested in how communities identify themselves in relation to their personal and professional networks.

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

GRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOW (FALL 2022)

Worked with the Media, Information, Data, and Society (MIDaS) Lab to study how Asian immigrants use media and digital platforms for political information. Recruited and interviewed Filipino immigrants and learned more about how respondents use news media and content from English and non-English sources.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT (SUMMER 2022)

Worked with the Objectivity in Journalism research project funded by the Stanton Foundation. Interviewed news leaders and working journalists about the journalism norm of objectivity. Researched changes in the news industry and the application of objectivity as an expectation and practice.

RESEARCH ASSISTANT (SUMMER 2021)

Interviewed participants for the Arizona Youth Identity Project. Studied how U.S.-born young adults in Arizona perceive their identity and status as Americans in the context of rapidly changing economic, demographic, and political conditions.
