SELECT JUDICIAL CITATIONS:

People v. Johnson, No. 1-22-0494, 2024 IL App (1st) 220494, ¶ 76, 2024 Ill. App. LEXIS 2615, at *28, 2024 WL 4864346, at *10 (Ill. App. Ct. 2024).

The majority relied, in part, on my work on what courts should do with unreliable eyewitness identifications when reversing a conviction for insufficiency of the evidence because testimony of four eyewitnesses was based on alleged observations that had occurred under conditions that call in question the reliability of their identifications.

People v. Weinstein, No. 64, ___ N.E.3d ___, ___, 42 N.Y.3d 439, at *13 n.15, 2024 WL 1773181, at *19 n.3 (N.Y. 2024) (Singas, J., dissenting).

The dissent cited my work with one of my graduate students when disagreeing with the majority of jurists on highest court in New York that Harvey Weinstein’s convictions for sexual assault should be overturned. The dissent cited our work to support its arguments about the complexities of acquaintance sexual assault prosecutions that are absent from sexual assault prosecution those involving strangers.

State v. Canady, No. 22-0397, 2023 Iowa App. LEXIS 522, at *9 n.7, 2023 WL 4531668, at *3 n.7 (Iowa Ct. App. July 13, 2023), vacated, 4 N.W.3d 661 (Iowa 2024).

An appellate court in Iowa relied on research I conducted while mentoring an undergraduate honors student. In the scholarship we published together, we offered an evidentiary framework for evaluating the admissibility of rap lyrics as part of the prosecution’s case-in-chief. The court refused to allow the existence of a rap video as evidence of the defendant’s intent to harm a decedent. It quoted our article when observing that rap “operates within a well-documented poetic tradition within African American culture that ritualizes invective, satire, obscenity and other verbal phenomena with transgressive aims. In so doing, the genre often emphasizes violence in inner-cities, especially as it relates to gangs, albeit not necessarily in an accurate manner.”

People v. Bright, No. 4-21-0317, 2022 Ill. App. Unpub. LEXIS, at *29–30, 2022 WL 17262139, at *10 (Nov. 23, 2022).

An appellate court in Illinois quoted my scholarship in an opinion about the potential unreliability of an eyewitness identification under circumstances in which a witness observed someone with a firearm and, therefore, may have focused on the weapon instead of on the characteristics of the perpetrator. In affirming the defendant’s conviction, the court noted that such evidence should not be raised on appeal, but should be presented at trial via expert testimony.

Hart v. State, No. 05-19-01394-CR, 2022 Tex. App. LEXIS 6574, at *44, 2022 WL 3754537, at *16 (Tex. App. Aug. 30, 2022) (Reichek, J., dissenting), rev’d, 688 S.W.3d 883, 890–91 (Tex. Crim. App. 2024).

A dissenting judge on the Texas Court of Appeals relied on research I produced while mentoring an undergraduate honors student. The judge would have overturned a conviction on the basis that the lyrics were more prejudicial than probative because, quoting our work, “gangsta rap like that at issue in this case is characterized by ‘lyric formulas,’ a key one of which involves fictionalized bragging about the performer’s ‘badness’ vis-à-vis criminal behavior.” The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the intermediate court, and, like the dissenting appellate court judge, quoted our work in determining that the defendant’s rap videos were inadmissible.

State v. Hernandez, No. 2 CA-CR 2018-0042, 2022 Ariz. App. Unpub. LEXIS 54, at *22 n.8, 2022 WL 200133, at *7 n.8 (Ariz. Ct. App. Jan. 21, 2022) (Eckerstrom, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part).

An appellate court in Arizona agreed that it constitutes error to exclude expert testimony on the unreliability of eyewitness identifications, especially when, as in this particular case, the identification was based on a witness identifying the suspect from a single photo that was not part of a photo array. The majority nonetheless held it was harmless error. A judge who dissented, in part, cited by research in support of its reasoning that the error was prejudicial, not harmless, “because eyewitness accuracy can be unreliable in emergent situations and because single-photo identification procedures pose risks of distorting memories through suggestion.”

United States v. Zayas, No. 2:12-CR-00944-2, 2021 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123474, at *14, 2021 WL 2679782, at *5 (D.N.M. June 30, 2021).

A federal district court cited my research on the gatekeeping role of the courts under Daubert as part of its analysis that the testimony of forensic pathologist was admissible to show that a child victim died as a result of blunt force trauma. The defendant had objected to the testimony as conclusory and without a valid and reliable scientific foundation. The court disagreed, ruling that the pathologist was a “experiential expert” who could give an opinion based on her expertise because, quoting my research, her opinion was not based “on mere speculation,” but rather her specialized knowledge as applied “to the facts at issue.”

State v. Carpenter, 605 S.W.3d 355, 367 n.8 (Mo. 2020).

Relying on my research, the Supreme Court of Missouri reversed a conviction for robbery that was largely based on a “show-up” identification on the grounds that the trial court should not have excluded expert testimony about the unreliability of such identifications. “[R]esearch has revealed that jury instructions that direct jurors in broad terms to exercise caution in evaluating eyewitness identifications are less effective than expert testimony in apprising the jury of the potential unreliability of eyewitness identification testimony.”

State v. Doolan, 942 N.W.2d 500, 528 (Iowa 2020) (Appel, J., dissenting).

State v. Booth-Harris, 942 N.W.2d 562, 586 (Iowa 2020) (Appel, J., dissenting).

In these companion cases, the dissents quoted from my scholarship extensively in calling for the state to reevaluate how it handles eyewitness testimony.

State v. Haley, 222 So. 3d 153, 164 n.7 (La. Ct. App. 2017).

In rejecting a criminal defendant’s challenge to the use of certain forensic evidence, the Louisiana Court of Appeals cited my work on Daubert v. Merrill Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., when analyzing the propriety of the trial court’s decision to admit certain expert testimony.

People v. Reed, No. A142590, 2017 Cal. App. Unpub. LEXIS 433, at *64, 2017 WL 244838, at *21 (Cal. Ct. App. Jan. 20, 2017).

In overturning a homicide conviction, a California appellate court cited by my scholarship in support of its conclusion that the defendant had been denied effective assistance of counsel because his lawyer had failed to proffer expert testimony on the unreliability of eyewitness identification. Notably, the court emphasized that the trial court would have been required to admit such expert testimony into evidence because the identification of the defendant was “a key element of the prosecution’s case but was not substantially corroborated by evidence giving it independent reliability.” Accordingly, the court concluded that it would be an abuse of discretion for a trial court to exclude “expert testimony on specific psychological factors ... that could have affected the accuracy of the identification, but were not likely to be fully known to or understood by the jury.”

Love v. State, 543 S.W.3d 835, 844 (Tex. Ct. Crim. App. 2016).

In overturning a capital conviction, the highest criminal court in Texas cited my scholarship to support the key proposition that the content of the defendant/appellant’s text messages could not be obtained without a probable cause—based warrant. Notably, this was the first appellate court to cite empirical legal scholarship for the proposition that society recognizes the propriety of assigning Fourth Amendment protection to the content of text messages.

Crawford v. U.S. Dep't of Treasury, No. 3:15-cv-250, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 131496, at *35 n.3, 2015 WL 5697552, at *11 n.3 (S.D. Ohio Sept 29, 2015).

Criticizing the U.S. Supreme Court's holding that depositors have no reasonable expectation of privacy in the information kept in bank records, a federal judge, citing my research, said, that "the Supreme Court's estimation of what a reasonable person might expect appears to be diverging from reality."

Jones v. Florida, 197 So. 3d 1085, 1091 n.7 (Fla. Ct. App. 2015).

Citing my research, this appellate decision held that a trial court in Florida abused its discretion in excluding expert testimony on the reliability of eyewitness testimony based on its finding that the testimony concerned common factors that everyone understood about eyewitness identification.

Commonwealth v. Gary, 91 A.3d 102, 150 n.6 (Pa. 2014).

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court adopted the federal automobile exception to the warrant requirement, thereby allowing officers to search a motor vehicle without a warrant when there was probable cause to do so and did not require any exigency beyond the inherent mobility of a motor vehicle. A dissenting justice cited my research on measuring reasonable expectations of privacy in arguing that the Pennsylvania constitution should provide more protection than the Fourth Amendment because the general public "as a whole may possess a greater expectation of privacy in their automobiles than the high Court has traditionally recognized."

Clark v. Arnold, 769 F.3d 711, 717 (9th Cir. 2014).

This federal appellate court relied heavily on my research on the insanity defense to support a conclusion that a criminal defendant had not been denied effective assistance of counsel during the litigation of his insanity defense.

United States v. Thomas, 763 F.3d 689, 695 (7th Cir. 2014).

This federal appeals court cited my research in support of the proposition that "establishing or bolstering evidence of the defendant's identity through means other than eyewitness testimony may in many cases be desirable."

Young v. Conway, 698 F.3d 69, 81 (2nd Cir. 2012).

Affirming a district court's decision to vacate a judgment of conviction in a habeas corpus action, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit relied on my scholarship to conclude that cross-racial identifications are particularly prone to errors when the person making the identification is Caucasian and the person being identified is African-American.

State v. Guilbert, 49 A.3d 705, 727 (Conn. 2012).

Two years after the Connecticut Supreme Court's decision in State v. Outing, the court reconsidered the issue and overruled State v. Kemp. In so holding, the court quoted my research on the need to admit expert testimony on the unreliability of eyewitness identifications because even though the scientific research on memory, generally, and eyewitness identification in particular are well accepted by scientists, they are largely unfamiliar to the average person and, in fact, are often "quite counterintuitive and hardly commonsensical."

Shea v. Royal Enterprises, Inc., No. 09 Civ. 8709, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63763, at *14, 2011 WL 2436709, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. June 16, 2011).

In a civil lawsuit for damages arising out of an event at a New York City bar, the plaintiff tried to prevent the defendants' forensic toxicology expert for testifying on the grounds that the expert had not used scientifically-valid methods to estimate the plaintiff's alleged blood alcohol concentration. The court cited my research in support of its criticisms of Widmark's equation with regard to its inability to accurately reflect the effects that food consumption has on blood alcohol absorption levels.

State v. Outing, 3 A.3d 1, 47 (Conn. 2010) (Palmer, J., concurring).

Three concurring justices of the Connecticut Supreme Court cited research in support of their argument that their decision in State v. Kemp, 507 A.2d 1387 (1986) (concluding that expert testimony on the fallibility of eyewitness identifications is unnecessary and, therefore, inadmissible because it is a subject within the ken of the average juror) should be overruled.

Wilson v. Gaetz, 608 F.3d 347, 353 (7th Cir. 2010).

When writing on behalf of a federal appellate court panel, noted jurist and scholar Judge Richard Posner cited the arguments I made as a critic of the “guilty but mentally ill” verdict in support of a finding that an attorney performed deficiently in presenting an insanity defense in murder trial, thereby supporting a Sixth Amendment ineffective assistance of counsel claim.

United States v. Smith, 621 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1209 (M.D. Ala. 2009).

Relying on my scholarship, this federal district court ruled that expert testimony regarding the unreliability of eyewitness identifications was admissible.

State v. Clopten, 223 P.3d 1103, 1109 n.9 (Utah 2009).

Citing my scholarship for the proposition that the inclusion of expert testimony regarding eyewitness identification carries significant advantages over the alternatives, namely cross-examination and jury instructions, the Utah Supreme Court ruled that trial courts in the state commit prejudicial error by excluding eyewitness expert testimony.

Ferensic v. Birkett, 451 F. Supp. 2d 874, 886 (E.D. Mich. 2006), aff’d 501 F.3d 469 (6th Cir. 2007).

Relying on my scholarship, this federal district court granted a habeas corpus petition on the basis that a prisoner was deprived of a substantial defense by exclusion of defense witness and expert witness of eyewitness identifications.

United States v. Thomas, No. CRIM. CCB–03–015, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3266, at *71, 2006 WL 140558, at *18 (D. Md. Jan. 13, 2006).

Relying on my scholarship, the federal court ruled that proffered behavioral science expert testimony should be excluded as unreliable under the Daubert test.

ACADEMIC ADMINISTRATIVE EXPERIENCE:

ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY PHOENIX, AZ

SCHOOL OF CRIMINOLOGY & CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Associate Director, Aug. 2014 – June 2022

Assist with supervising all aspects of the operations of a school consisting of 29 tenured/tenure-track faculty; 18 full-time lecturers and instructors; approximately 50 faculty associates/adjunct professors; and roughly 2,800 students (approximately 1,110 undergraduate students on campus, 1,370 undergraduate students online, 38 master's students on campus, 240 master's students online, and 38 Ph.D. students). Responsibilities routinely include hiring, supervising, and evaluating academic advisors, support staff, and all nontenure-track faculty; budgeting; reviewing and approving travel requests; class scheduling; adjudicating grievances and grade appeals; mentoring junior faculty; overseeing academic dishonesty cases; developing and overseeing of curriculum, including courses as well as degree and certificate programs.

Director of Undergraduate Programs, Aug. 2016 – Aug. 2019

Chair Undergraduate Curriculum Committee. Review and approve all articulation requests. Serve as transfer liaison for all in-state community colleges.

Barrett Honors College Faculty Honors Advisor, Aug. 2016 – June 2020

Serve as Faculty Honors Advisor for all criminology and criminal justice students pursuing degrees through ASU's Barrett Honors College.

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY

LONG BEACH, CA

DIRECTOR, SCHOOL OF CRIMINOLOGY, CRIMINAL JUSTICE, &
EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT, Dec. 2013 – Aug. 2014

CHAIR, DEPARTMENT OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE, Aug. 2007 – Dec. 2013

Supervise all aspects of the operations of a department consisting of between 24 and 43 faculty members and roughly 1,100 students (approximately 775 undergraduate majors, 200 undergraduate students in two minors, and 130 graduate students in two master's programs). Coordinate recruitment of faculty and staff. Evaluate and supervise support staff. Mentor faculty and evaluate their performance to aid in their professional growth. Provide recommendations and data to committees and administrators to assist in making decisions regarding faculty reappointment, tenure, and promotion. Encourage and assist faculty to expand their professional development relative to their disciplines, interpersonal relations with students and colleagues, and interactions within the department. Promote and facilitate faculty involvement in scholarly endeavors, instructional and professional programs, professional organizations, and in service to the department, college, university, community, and profession. Assist in the design, implementation, and administration of departmental policies and procedures. Represent department to college, university, and community leaders. Develop and evaluate curricular programs. Formulate class schedules. Propose and respond to new ideas, innovate courses, and the advancement of existing curricular offerings. Advise students concerning both degree and career objectives. Develop, manage, and administer departmental budget and resources. Approve all undergraduate honors theses. Approve all master's theses and project reports for the M.S. in criminal justice on behalf of the university.
